Design and Construction

Medieval dungeons were typically constructed in the lower levels of castles or fortresses, often deep beneath the main living quarters. Their architecture was dictated by function—security, containment, and, occasionally, torture—rather than comfort or humane treatment.

- Extreme Cold and Dampness: The underground environment was typically cold, damp, and moldy. Water seeped through stone walls, creating puddles and promoting disease.
- Poor Ventilation: Limited airflow led to stale, foul air filled with the stench of human waste, rot, and decomposition.
- Sanitation: Sanitary facilities were nonexistent; prisoners often used the corner of their cell or had no facilities at all. Waste accumulated, further worsening health conditions.

Health Hazards and Disease

The environment was conducive to disease outbreaks. Common afflictions included:
